Miss Anne Whitney
The Charlegate
Boston
Mass.

Wellesley College,
Wellesley, Massachusetts.

Nov. 16 [1912]

Dear Miss Whitney: - Professor Brown, of our Department and Grant could grant it, of giving of your friends and admirers at Wellesley chance of meeting you some afternoon. Would the little bit of the day know any one of the great many admirers at Wellesley
chance of meeting you
for you, let us show in this little any one of the great

other weeks? But I mean I talk about that till I hear from you. May this be soon?

I'm on the wing for New York to speak in a big church - about the day! - tomorrow night. I don't like to leave my pretty new home.
"Moral Aspects of the Class Struggle" is my theme.
Please, if it won't be too much Effort be too great? Would it bore you? Please be quite candid, for I'm not at all sure whether you will think it wise to accord us this favor. But I hope, because it would mean so very much to people at the College to have the chance of meeting the sculptor of Miss Martineau and "Roma".

Friday or Saturday, in the week either of Dec. 9 or

Dec. 14, seem to be the days most open for Miss Brown and me. The reception would be in the Art Building, and ^{and} ~~how~~ ^{you} could stay a little out of any small crowd there might be, and have people presented to you in quiet, one or two at a time. If you come, is there any way in which we could secure photographs of your
